NARROW ESCAPE.

A well-known employee of the Southern Railway, a man very fond of fishing, who could be seen most every day wend ing his way up Prince street with a bunch of eels, of which he is particularly fond, yesterday decided to take a trip across the Potomac in a launch. On the re-turn trip he was seated in a comfortable arm chair on the after part of the boat and was warned about the danger of his position, but with an "I don't care" air, he remained in the chair. Pleasure in his confortable position was but short, for a swell from a passing steambos jarred the chair and precipitated him into the river while the launch was proceeding at the rate of 10 miles an hour The fact that he was overboard was manifest immediately by the shouts for nelp which he gave. The bost was most in rescuing their companion. They reached him just in time, and today he is telling of the harrowing experience of yesterday.

The Potomac is wide, The Potomac is deep, But the Potomac is no place for amatuers
